

Create a responsive webpage layout that is as similar to the attached image as possible. Feel free to add in images or text to any of the boxes to see how the responsiveness really works with content.

Only the large version of the page has to match the example image. The boxes may flow as you wish as the window size gets smaller.

I recommend you use foundation, however you can use bootstrap or code it yourself from scratch. But remember, the page must respond to resizing in order to be considered responsive.
